

On Saturday night the police in Sydney got a call reporting a disturbance to the peace. They drove out to discover a smashed computer on a sidewalk. When they questioned the 51 year old involved with the incident he said that he had gotten so frustrated with his computer that he threw it out the window.

No formal charges were pressed against him, however he was made to clean up the broken machine. A police spokesperson sympathized with the man, saying "Who hasn't felt like doing that?"
